Bonus eruption pits AHS against health minister

Executive bonuses.

They've got 99 problems but getting rich ain't one

ROBSON FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Directors of Alberta's health system defiantly challenged the provincial government Tuesday, refusing to rescind $3.2 million in bonus pay for 99 top executives, a move Health Minister Fred Horne said "we cannot and will not accept."

The explosive exchange played out in a hastily organized meeting of the Alberta Health Services board in which members re-affirmed their commitment to doling out "pay at risk" to senior executives, in spite of a last-minute directive from Horne to reconsider.

In a public statement, Horne described the bonus pay as "completely out of step with the times," as the province tightens its belt and doctors and nurses face wage freezes.

But board chair Stephen Lockwood said it's simply a matter of honouring executives' contracts and bristled at what he described as Horne's "attempt to politically interfere" with AHS operations.

That, Lockwood added, is dangerous territory for the health minister to wander into.

"We must remain an arm's-length organization if we are to succeed," he said.

Horne also announced Tuesday the province will begin "an immediate review" of AHS governance "to ensure the government, and people of Alberta, can have trust and confidence" in the board.

Lockwood called that a waste of taxpayers' money and shot back by accusing the province of withholding financial documents for political reasons.

"We've been directed to defer release of our annual report and our financial statements," he said. "I wonder why that is."

AHS needs "people willing to stand up," Lockwood added, and while he said things aren't bad enough for him to tender his resignation over this issue, he openly mused about the possibility of being forced out.

"It's up to the minister to ask for my resignation if he doesn't like what's occurred today," he said.

Horne had no further comment Tuesday but is scheduled to hold a press conference Wednesday morning.

Affluent tenants in housing meant for poor: CTF

Hundreds of well-off Calgarians are living in subsidized housing, including some with household incomes as high as $172,000 a year, according to information obtained by the Canadian Taxpayers Federation.

"I couldn't believe it," CTF Alberta director Derek Fildebrandt said of his reaction when he first read documents he received under the provincial Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy (FOIP) Act.

According to those documents, more than 1,200 tenants of subsidized housing in Calgary are earning between $50,000 and $172,000 a year, including 18 earning more than $120,000.

Fildebrandt said there's "no excuse" for people of such means to be taking advantage of programs "intended for the poor."

He said the province should change landlord-tenant laws to make it easier to evict high earners from subsidized housing and the city-owned Calgary Housing Company (CHC) should crack down on those abusing the system.

But CHC general manager Rick Farrell said his organization already did all it effectively could when it implemented new measures in 2011, including changing lease agreements with new tenants.

"We switched ... to fixed-term leases so that they get renewed every year," said Farrell. "We're on the track to eliminating that problem. It just takes time."

Alberta Law Enforcement Response Teams Staff Sgt. John Guigon and Calgary police Insp. Mike Bossley announce child-pornography and harassment charges on Tuesday morning against a 15-year-old. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Explicit texts prompt child-porn charges

Criminal Code.

Rarely used provision specifies that written words can be the same as photos, videos

jeremy.nolaus@metronews.ca

Explicit texts allegedly sent from a Calgary teen to his ex-girlfriend have prompted police to lay child-pornography charges.

The case, made public on Tuesday, relies on a rarely used provision of the Criminal Code of Canada, as typical child-porn cases involve photos and videos of minors engaged in sexual acts.

Staff Sgt. John Guigon with the Alberta Law Enforcement Response Teams said he hopes Tuesday's announcement sends a message to others, adding there's "no veil of anonymity online."

"Everything you do on the Internet leaves a footprint," he said.

The accused, 15, allegedly used an iPod and messaging service account owned by one of his parents to send explicit texts to his ex-girlfriend over a period in February and again in late May.

Police were alerted to the situation by the principal of the school they both attend.

Guigon said the case serves as an important example of why parents should pay attention to their child's activities online, as the messages sent from the accused parent's account were never deleted and could have been viewed by them at any time.

If the parents had intervened earlier, "we may not be standing here today," Guigon told reporters.

City defence lawyer Balfour Der said he knew of a similar matter that saw charges laid last year.

"It is unusual ... but the law doesn't discriminate on age. It's based on what you have in your possession," Der said.

Sexting

- In all, city police said they have been made aware of 12 cases involving "sexting," in which minors have sent explicit messages to someone else or shared them back and forth.

- Police have warned that often the content of those messages, including pictures and videos, can be shared among third parties and used to harass or exploit the minor portrayed.

No relation. Local bakery helps Tom Baker group with cancer fundraiser

A group of Calgary fundraisers are close to completing its goal for the Ride to Conquer Cancer, thanks in part to a local bakery.

The Tom Baker Cancer Conquerors, a group of more than 70 health-care professionals and community members, set an ambitious goal to raise $250,000 for this year's ride, which takes place June 22 and 23, and are only a few thousand dollars from reaching that goal.

Dr. Jan-Willem Henning, team captain and medical oncologist at the Tom Baker Cancer Centre, said they set their goal high because the money they raise will go directly to the centre.

"The money goes back to the clinical trial ... so the money benefits the patients directly," said Henning, adding a $50,000 donation from the Calgary Italian Bakery was a huge boost to their fundraising efforts.

"They certainly helped out tremendously," said Henning.

Calgary Italian Bakery owners David Bontorin, his brother Louis and their father Luigi knew they wanted to celebrate their 50th year in business but decided to forgo a party in exchange for a donation to battle cancer.

"We said ... we should do something that's going to be longer lasting," said Bontorin.

"My father is a cancer survivor ... and my wife Diane was also diagnosed in 2011 with breast cancer," said Bontorin, adding both were treated at the Tom Baker.

Noise Snare to make a comeback this summer to Calgary streets on June 20.

Bylaw operations co-ordinator Andrew Bissett said that much was learned during the first enforcement period last year and that more effort will be made to set it up in specific locations rather than just responding to complaints from the public.

"We have ongoing communications with the inventor," Bissett added. "I think it's important to remember this is a one-of-a-kind device."

Earlier in the day, that same inventor, Edmonton's Mark Nesdoly, indicated he's working on a second-generation product that will be "smaller, cheaper, faster."

Questions about the Noise

Snare's effectiveness were raised by multiple Calgary aldermen after it was revealed that just one motorist was caught last year.

Nesdoly defended the application of the snare, noting his research indicates it's far more effective when not being manned by a bylaw officer.

Two children were transported to hospital with minor injuries following a school bus crash in Airdrie on Tuesday.

RCMP say the First Student Canada school bus that was travelling eastbound turned into the path of an oncoming westbound welding truck on Highway 567 near Symons Valley Road.

While investigators say they don't believe alcohol or speed are considered factors in the collision, the driver of the school bus has been charged for making an unsafe turn. METRO

Response. Minister balks at idea of students leaving en masse to Saskatchewan

Claims from Saskatchewan universities that students are fleeing Alberta in search of greener pastures to the east are "not backed by actual facts," says the provincial post-secondary minister.

Thomas Lukaszuk responded Tuesday to a Metro story in which the University of Saskatchewan and University of Regina claimed they were being flooded with applications from Alberta students, who had either been turned away or feared they would be by universities grappling with a seven per cent cut in operational funding.

The U of S said Monday it expects one-sixth of its new student body this fall to be from Alberta, a 15 per cent increase year-over-year. The U of R said applications from Calgary alone had doubled.

Glitch-plagued fleet

Scrap subs or buy new ones soon, think-tanks say

A pair of think-tanks say the Harper government should either announce plans to scrap its glitch-plagued submarine fleet or begin replacing them before any more tax dollars are wasted.

The Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives and the Rideau Institute say the Victoria-class submarines, purchased second-hand from Britain in the late 1990s, are within a decade of ending their service life.

A report written by academic Michael Byers and researcher Stewart Webb asks whether Canada even needs submarines.

Mayor Ernest Troiano Jr. thinks he's found a way to put one of this Jersey shore resort town's problems behind it. Wildwood is ready to ban overly saggy pants, no ifs, ands or butts.

The city is set to pass a law Wednesday regulating how people dress on its boardwalk. It bans going shirtless, as well as walking on the boardwalk with bare feet.

But the provision that has gained widespread attention is a prohibition on pants that sag more than three inches below the hips, exposing either skin or underwear.

Meatless Mondays

Meat sales surge for Vancouver butcher shop

Vancouver's West Broadway Meat Co. saw a 15 per cent increase in sales on June 10, the same day the city encouraged Vancouverites to eat vegetarian in support of a global movement called Meatless Mondays.

The trend was fuelled by a public butchering of a 350-pound water buffalo. The shop butchers animals regularly and the public is always invited to watch the process through a viewing window.

But that didn't stop a crowd of animal-rights protesters and camera crews from showing up at the shop in time for the demonstration.

An unsettling future

The projections paint an unsettling picture of New York's future: A city where, by the 2050s, 800,000 people could be living in a flood zone that would cover one-quarter of the land, and there could be as many 90-degree days as is now normal for Birmingham, Ala.

posed Tuesday to transform how New York City girds itself for storms and global warming.

Bloomberg's proposals also include building dunes on Staten Island and the Rockaways, firming up the shoreline with bulkheads in various neighbourhoods and building a levee and new "Seaport City" development at the South Street Seaport that would echo nearby Battery Park City.

The mayor is also suggesting giving $1.2 billion in grants to property owners to flood-proof their buildings and $50 million to nursing homes to improve theirs; making hospitals even in rarely flooded areas upgrade their pumps and electrical equipment; and expanding beaches and marshes, among other ideas.

Bloomberg acknowledged that much of the work would extend beyond the end of his term this year. "This is urgent work, and it must begin now."

Outbreak. Organic berry mix linked to hepatitis

The Public Health Agency of Canada says about 1,200 Canadians bought a blend of frozen berries linked to a hepatitis A outbreak in the United States.

It says the consumers, most of whom live in British Columbia and Alberta, bought the product from U.S. Costco stores in West Coast states.

The Oregon producer has recalled the mix, sold in Canada under the name Harris Teeter Organic Antioxidant Berry Blend.

World Bank turns to private sector

The World Bank is undertaking an ambitious goal to end extreme global poverty within a generation by encouraging the involvement of the private sector.

"We need you to help bend the arc of history and banish extreme poverty from this Earth forever," bank president Jim Yong Kim said Tuesday in a speech to the Conference of Montreal.

Currently, the $125 billion a year in official development assistance "pales in comparison to the need," Kim said.

India alone has 400 million people living in extreme poverty and an infrastructure deficit of $1 trillion over the next five years that would eat up all the official aid.

Funding needs total $4.5 trillion if you add the other developing countries, Kim said.

He said African heads of state recently signalled that more than energy and infrastructure, they need private-sector investment to help create jobs.

Consequently, the World Bank is aiming to end extreme poverty by 2030 by encouraging private sector investors to step up to the plate.

"While official development assistance might be limited there is so much (private) capital sitting on the sidelines right now," he told the economic conference.

Kim described investing in the developing world as a smart thing to do economically and something that can also bring benefits to the world's poorest — benefits he admits underestimating in the past.

The agency is targeting the 1.2 billion people who live on less than $1.25 per day. That's down from 1.9 billion people in 1990.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's contribution

The Conservatives announced Tuesday that they would provide $66 million to help developing countries attract private-sector investments.

- Included is $20 million over five years to the World Bank's conflict-affected and fragile economies centre. It is also creating a web page to provide the private sector with more information.

Birth control pills linked to 23 deaths: Report

Yaz and Yasmin.

Health Canada claims 600 instances of adverse reactions to popular contraceptives

The birth control pills Yaz and Yasmin have been linked to the deaths of at least 23 Canadian women, the youngest just 14 years old, Health Canada documents say.

The deaths are among about 600 adverse reactions reported among women taking the contraceptives between 2007 and Feb. 28 of this year, Health Canada confirmed Tuesday.

Doctors and pharmacists who submitted the reports to the Canada Vigilance Program said Yaz and Yasmin are suspected in the 23 deaths. The reports say most of the women died suddenly after developing blood clots, a known risk with the pills.

Since 2007, Health Canada said the program has received reports of adverse reactions among 333 women taking Yasmin and 267 women prescribed Yaz.

Among those cases were 15 deaths linked to Yasmin and eight to Yaz. More than half of the women who died were under age 26, with the youngest being a 14-year-old girl. Most deaths reportedly occurred soon after the women started taking the drugs.

Yaz and Yasmin are both made by Bayer and are often characterized as "newer-generation" birth control pills.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Causation vs. correlation

Health Canada said reports of adverse reactions cannot be interpreted as showing cause and effect.

- "Often it is not possible to determine if an adverse reaction reported to Health Canada is a result of using a specific health product," the department said by email. "Other factors contributing to the AR could be a person's health conditions or other health products."
- Bayer says the pills are safe and effective when used as directed.

Protests rage in Turkey's Taksim Square

Thwarting liberalism. Russian lawmakers pass anti-gay education bill

A bill that stigmatizes gay people and bans giving children any information about homosexuality won overwhelming approval Tuesday in Russia's lower house of parliament.

Hours before the State Duma passed the Kremlin-backed law in a 436-0 vote with one abstention, more than two dozen protesters were attacked by hundreds of anti-gay activists and detained by police.

The bill banning the "propaganda of nontraditional sexual relations" still needs to be passed by the appointed upper house and signed into law by President Vladimir Putin, but neither step is in doubt.

The measure is part of an effort to promote traditional Russian values instead of Western liberalism, which the Kremlin and the Russian Orthodox Church see as corrupting Russian youth and contributing to the protests against Putin's rule.

The only parliament member to abstain Tuesday was Ilya Ponomaryov, who has supported anti-Putin protesters despite belonging to a pro-Kremlin party.

What's an average TV binge? 4 episodes in a row

Glued to the couch.

Marathon viewing is 'transformational' trend in television industry

Canadians' growing appetite for binging on episodes of their favourite TV shows represents a "transformational" trend that's shaking up the industry, says

Rogers, which released the results of an online poll Tuesday.

In the survey of 1,275 Canadians conducted by Head Research, viewers were asked how many episodes of a show they went through consecutively during a binge-watching session on a weeknight or on a weekend. The average during the week was four straight episodes, and 4.6 on weekends.

The figures weren't surprising to David Purdy, Rogers' senior vice-president of content, who said binge-viewing is a major trend the company is paying close attention to.

"We're kind of in the beginning of what we think is a major transformational stage in the TV world, so we have a ton of questions and we're doing a lot of research these days," Purdy said, noting that young people in particular have been identified as big fans of marathon viewing.

When asked how many episodes of a show they watched consecutively during a viewing binge, the respondents who were 34 and younger averaged 5.4 episodes on a weeknight and 6.6 episodes on a weekend. Among those 55 and older, the averages were 3.2 on a weeknight and 3.3 episodes on a weekend. THE CANADIAN PRESS

HOW MY POOR HEART ACHES

*Every breath you take Every move you make
Every bond you break
Every step you take
I'll be watching you...—The Police*

For some reason I can't get that song out of my head.

Maybe that's because it turns out to be massively prophetic. The Police are watching every move I make—and every move you make, too. And the "police" in question are not Sting; they are the mother of all police: The National Security Agency.

Every phone call and digital interaction ever made for the past seven years. Not just in the United States, but whatever's on the servers of Microsoft, Google, Apple, Facebook and YouTube.

So if you're me and you rely on Microsoft Exchange for your email, and download it onto your iPhone and iPad, the police are recording every etc., and they're doing it over and over again on multiple servers.

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan

They must be sick of me by now.

But let me tell you, not as sick of me as I am of them. And here's why:

1) "They" (Big Brother, The Man, The Police, Sting, whatever) have all this information and they still can't prevent a couple of terrorist-goofs from some obscure former Soviet Republic from blowing up the Boston Marathon. The more we learn about these two, the more it was obvious they were a threat to themselves and anyone not on their freakish wavelength—and the NSA was all over their freakish wavelength. So where are we going with this?

2) "They" tell nobody nothing, er, anything.

They have secret court orders compelling Internet and phone companies to fork over data, the details of which remain secret. If some guy named Edward Snowden hadn't decided to go public with this information, we'd still be accessing the Sports Illustrated Online Swimsuit Edition in a fool's paradise of assumed privacy. Meanwhile, the Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives calls Snowden a "traitor" for his pains. Let me just say: Ed, this fool thinks you're a hero.

Jesus Christ, breakdance superstar

MATT CARDY/GETTY IMAGES

Sacred street art

A giant mural depicting a breakdancing Jesus—shown here with its artist, Cosmo Sarson—has been unveiled in Bristol, England. Breakdancing Jesus, which took four days to paint and involved a kilo of glitter, was inspired by an event in the Vatican in 2004 where breakdancers performed to an applauding Pope John Paul II. METRO

Q and A

Two cultures fuse

COSMO SARSON
Graffiti artist

You drew inspiration from breakdancers who performed for Pope John Paul II. But what's the message behind your mural?

It's not intended to be any sort of religious propaganda—it's meant to be humorous. In a way, the mural is poking fun at Western religion. However, even within Christianity, at the wedding at Cana for instance, there would have been dancing. I would say it's a fusion of two cultures: the world of hip hop, which breakdancing is a part of, and Christianity.

You could say the mural is a modern take of an amazing Christ, no?

Yeah, I would be really pleased with that interpretation. I think if John Paul II were alive today and saw this, he would love it.

RE: Why The !@#$ Can't I Swear? Published June 11

I am surprised that she cannot figure out that it is inappropriate to swear in a family restaurant with kids present! I was in the military for 21 years and can swear better than most, but I'm smart enough to figure out when and where to do it.

As for the father who reprimanded Jessica and her BF, good for him.

Her comments are a representation of everything that is wrong with this world; that people are too self-centred and don't care about anyone else, even when they are wrong.

Jeff Taylor, Ottawa

Jessica Napier seems to suggest that foul language in public places is an acceptable norm and her recent reprimand by a father at an adjacent table at a restaurant was an over-the-top reaction in today's world.

Yes I agree. Foul language seems to be an accepted norm in many young people's communication, but I don't agree it is a step for the better or part of a licence to free speech. As she says, it often comes from laziness and probably from a lack of, dare I say, more appropriate language skills. I, for one, don't wish to hear swearing in a restaurant, on buses, in malls, or anywhere else just because 20 somethings can get away with it.

Sensitivity behind the Steel

Interview. The new Superman speaks to Metro about how this superhero is vulnerable and realistic — as real as someone who flies, at least

NED EHRLICH
Metro World News

Iron Man gets the best jokes. Batman gets the best films. Wonder Woman gets the best plane (invisible!). Now 75-years-old, the galaxy's most famous Kryptonian is back in Man of Steel, a grounded take on the icon, directed by Zack Snyder.

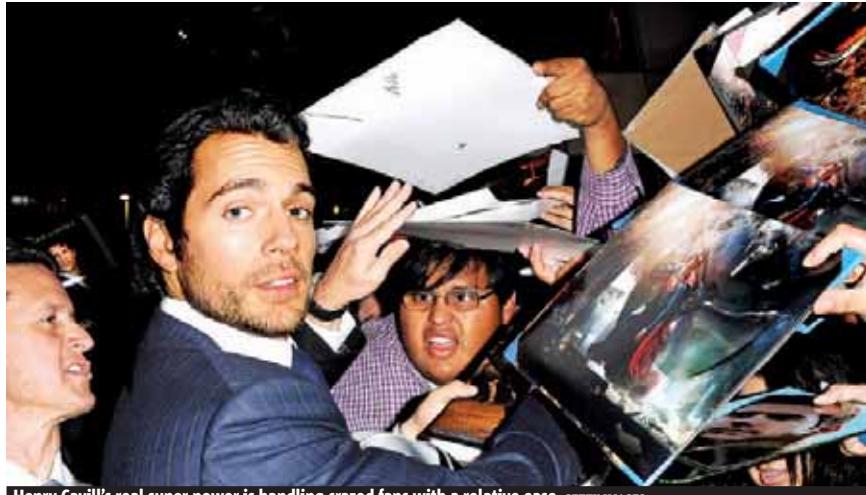

In the film — an origin story — the young alien is scuttled to Earth, grows up, meets a girl (Amy Adams) and defends our planet from the evil General Zod (Michael Shannon).

He also mopes around. A lot. In a tonal continuation of The Dark Knight series, our hero has feelings, and they add an extra dimension that the creators (including producer Christopher Nolan) hope make the character less boring and more relevant.

Henry Cavill, a British actor best known for TV's The Tudors, stars as the Man of Steel. In a one on one, we asked him why he's not so steely after all.

We've gone from square-jawed demigods to heroes that have to show vulnerability or a flaw. What do you think of that progression?

Well, when they were initially conceived, we needed them — desperately. We needed them to be strong-jawed superheroes — the classic hands-on-hips, nothing can touch me, bullets bouncing off them. I mean, when Superman first came around we were out of First World War, and Second World War is sort of creeping up and we needed those guys who could flit around the place and do wonderful things, and we could fantasize about all the world's problems being solved.

And now?

And now they've evolved into a more modern, more realistic thing to go with the times, so that the stories are still interesting. People these days don't find the immovable object interesting — the untouchable thing and the hero who will always win. We want to think that maybe our hero will lose, but then he wins. We must be able to associate with them. They've become less of a fantasy and more of an ideal to strive towards.

What do you think audiences need from superheroes now?

It's the same thing we've always needed, which is that sense of hope. There's always something going wrong in the world. It just shifts depending on the generation. And it's always important to me. I've never played this sort of, 'OK, I'm going to talk (in a low, gravelly voice) all of a sudden.' If I heard someone talking that way, I'd look at them funny.

nice to have that fantasy of there's someone who's going to fix everything. It's beating the odds, and that's been the same with mythological characters since the dawn of time, since we could think up gods — good gods and bad gods. Nothing has changed in the human psyche. We still need that.

What has Man of Steel done to make him more relatable?

We've given him a very human essence. As much as he's not susceptible to the frailties of the human physical body, he's very much susceptible to the frailties of the human psyche, and that is what really makes us in touch with someone else, makes us go, 'I know your pain' or, 'Yeah, I've felt that happy before.' That's how we associate with people, and in this we've brought that to the character.

The Dark Knight director Christopher Nolan produced Man of Steel and has made the DC Comics world feel tethered to reality more than to cartoons.

It ties in very much with the evolution of the superhero.

We need to see them in a real-world setting. It helps us to feel more and to be a part of the story if we base it in realism, and that's important to me. I've never played this sort of, 'OK, I'm going to talk (in a low, gravelly voice) all of a sudden.' If I heard someone talking that way, I'd look at them funny.

Garden of glass

Dream Garden, a jaw-dropping glass mosaic, is close to the historic district but easy to miss unless you know it's there. Right up your alley

In the middle of the Old City neighbourhood's cool art galleries, vintage furniture stores and trendy clothing boutiques is a charming cobblestone lane that has barely changed in 200 years: Elfreth's Alley, often called the oldest continuously inhabited street in America. It was built for carts travelling to the nearby Delaware River waterfront and named for Jeremiah Elfreth, an 18th-century blacksmith who built and rented out several homes there.

Ireland banks on luring its emigrés back in 2013 with 'gathering' events

Home, green home.

The Emerald Isle is looking to boost its lagging economy by tapping into its diaspora crowd

The tall ships looked majestic as they sailed into the bay — replicas of the masted, rigged vessels that once transported millions of emigrants from these shores.

The ships had departed from Liverpool, England, three days earlier, carrying descendants of Irish emigrants in a reverse voyage billed as an opportunity to "sail home to your roots." A crowd on the docks cheered as they entered Dublin port and the crew unfurled a giant green banner with the words, "Welcome to Our Gathering."

The May voyage was just one event among thousands taking place throughout Ireland, part of an ambitious yearlong tourism drive to boost the country's battered economy by luring its diaspora home.

Billed as The Gathering, the initiative is really multiple gatherings, large and small, ranging from the cultural and historic to the sporting, the quirky and the poignant.

"Bring them home. Treat them well. The Gathering is 'Project Ireland'. Do your bit," Taoiseach (Prime Minister) Enda Kenny exhorted fellow countrymen and women when the initiative was launched earlier in the year.

In every county, town and parish it seems that some group has taken his words to heart.

Highlights include flagship events like a July 21 Riverdance extravaganza, in which 2,013 master dancers are expected to kick up their heels along the banks of Dublin's River Liffey and attempt to break the world record for step-dancing. The last record was set in Nashville

The Powerscourt Estate and other great houses, castles and gardens in Ireland are hosting events connected to The Gathering. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS with 632 dancers in 2011.

Popular annual cultural events such as the Galway Arts Festival, the Cork Jazz Festival and the Dingle Tradfest are all incorporating "gathering" programs, as are big sporting events. Choral gatherings are huge. It seems like every little village or town is hosting a gathering and inviting choirs from Europe and the U.S. to join them.

There are busking gatherings and blacksmith gatherings, scientist gatherings and even an "Evil Eye" spiritual gathering in Donegal in August.

There are quirky gatherings to raise money for charity — for example the redhead convention in Cork in August. And bog-snorkelling, sheaf-tossing and welly-throwing (Wellington rubber boots) gatherings.

The goal, tourism officials say, is to tap into the estimated 70 million people who claim Irish descent worldwide and bring at least 350,000 additional tourists home.

From around the world, they are heeding the call.

A gang of London ex-pats has organized a bike ride from Trafalgar Square to Killorglin, County Kerry, in time for the annual three-day Puck Fair in August. Reputed to be the oldest fair in Ireland, the highlight is catching a wild mountain goat and crowning it King Puck.

Legend has it that during the 17th century, a goat broke away from its herd to warn the town of the advancing army of English commander Oliver Cromwell during his conquest of Ireland.

A group of Irish emigrants living in Toronto who, partly out of homesickness, organized a club there to play camogie, is returning as part of an international camogie gathering at the end of July. (The sport of camogie is women's hurling.)

The event includes matches in Dublin's Croke Park stadium, hallowed ground for the Gaelic Athletic Association, Ireland's biggest sporting organization.

"To come home and play in Croke Park is like a dream come true," said camogie player Marie O'Riordan, who emigrated to Toronto from Cork in 2009. "It's a fantastic way for emigrants like us to keep the connection and be part of something positive for our country."

But The Gathering has its share of critics too, notably actor Gabriel Byrne, who spent two years as Ireland's cultural ambassador to the U.S. In interviews last year, he dismissed the initiative as a cynical government effort to "shake down" emigrants "for a few quid."

Whether the effort can draw enough tourists to dent Ireland's economic woes remains to be seen. Ireland has been in economic turmoil since the real estate boom collapsed in 2008. Unemployment stands near 14 per cent and emigration is once again commonplace among the young.

Hit the road, app

The number of travel-related apps is somewhat overwhelming. For travellers anxious to weed through the noise here are five that are worth paying attention to.

Google Maps

Google Maps is for people who never want to get lost again. It is not only the best navigation and mapping tool out there for drivers offering traffic information and Google StreetView modes, but the Android version comes with turn-by-turn GPS directions for walking, driving and biking. It even has indoor maps for stores, some hotels and airports, so you can literally plot your entire journey between the front door and the airport gate.

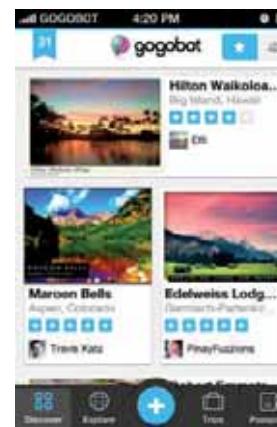

Worldmate

Worldmate is like a travel agent at your fingertips. This free app will organize every detail of your trip itinerary from your flight times to your hotel confirmations. Once you input your travel details it automatically provides destination-specific information, directions and useful tools like a currency convertor and tip calculator. It also syncs to your social network.

Livecity

Livecity app is your man in the know. Whether you're looking for a concert, exhibit, game or play, just type in the city you're in and get a full listing of all the events by location. The database is updated daily. You will have to pay for it, but I would recommend signing up for the premium version so you can avoid having to navigate through the ads.

Gogobot

Gogobot is for people seeking input from friends and people in the know on their travel choices. It is a free iPhone and Android app (and website) that allows you to send queries about a destination to your Twitter and Facebook networks and to the site's own members to amplify the word of mouth request. The result is the opportunity for personalized recommendations on more than 60,000 destinations around the world.

Living Earth

Living Earth comes highly recommended by my friend @MSiddiqi. She has just left on a six month #WrongWay-Round global tour, hitting destinations around the world in the off season. This weather and clock app lets you program in every stop on your journey and with one touch of a button you have a constant real-time update on what to expect when you arrive. It does cost you $2.99 to download, but the 3D simulation of our planet and the graphics are phenomenal.

Exhibit really gets under our skin

Body Worlds.

Showcase of the wonders of human anatomy is in Edmonton this year

Come to the Body Worlds exhibit, look at plastinated people without their skin on, and any initial squeamishness is — within minutes — subsumed by sheer fascination.

It's who we are in all our forms, put together and reverse engineered like a garage with all the components on the shelves beside a fully assembled machine that is as durable as it is fragile — the ultimate body shop.

"We'll see people bring their little kids through, and the kids tend to be just as fascinated and learn just as much as the adults do," said Mike Steger of Edmonton's Telus World of Science, which is hosting the exhibit until mid-October.

"We're going to tell you the story of the cycle of life: the human body from birth to childhood to youth and old age, and everything in between."

Steger calls it the ultimate anatomy lesson. "You can look at it in books, you can see it on TV, (but) it's not the same as coming through."

It's a one-hour stroll among the display cases, longer if you want to go back and reread the information boards or listen again to audio recordings.

It's the good, the bad and the downright sobering.

The signature pieces are 20 models of plastinated cadavers showing the intricate interplay of muscle and bone. There is a batter swatting a baseball, a skateboarder, a pair ice dancing and a hockey player (in an Edmonton Oilers helmet) barreling over an opponent.

Body Worlds is a one-hour stroll through a display of plastinated cadavers. THE CANADIAN PRESS

They are preserved through a process called plastination, in which the bodily fluids and soluble fats are replaced by fluid plastics that are later hardened.

The muscles remain red, the fat is white. There is a brain as it sits in the skull and a brain on a table with a spinal cord trailing behind.

There is a display of the intricate web of nerve endings running throughout the body resembling a futuristic Spider-Man suit. There are examples of

Healthy living

The Body Worlds exhibit's focus is on preventative health, things you can do to stay active. "We're going to leave you with a healthy to-do list," said Steger.

The exhibit is formally titled The Cycle of Life and is one of nine such Body Worlds travelling exhibits around the world. Others focus on certain aspects of lifestyle or on body parts like the heart.

The exhibits have been around for 18 years and have been seen by more than 36 million.

Those who attend come to look at strangers but end up rediscovering themselves.

And afterward likely go for a salad and a workout.

saving devices.

"When people come through this exhibit, everybody can sort of identify with some part of it. Everybody has got an ache or a pain or some issue," said Steger.

Unforgettable are the two brains side by side: one a spongy, healthy, firm, normal brain, the other a desiccated, crenellated Alzheimer's brain — the physical manifestation of a disease that robs someone, and their loved ones, of so much.

Given that the exhibits are real people who have willingly donated themselves to science, there is no touching and no photography.

The exhibit is not without controversy given that it must educate while remaining respectful of personal dignities and beliefs.

For example, the area on the start of life — the fetuses in various stages of development — is partially curtained off to ensure only those who wish to see enter and those who prefer not to don't just wander in.

The Power to Surprise

From generic job to a work of art

Changing gears.

Later-in-life careers in art can prove rewarding to retirees and weary employees

One was a stockbroker, another a computer whiz. There's a therapist and a small-business owner. Each retired from a traditional career and launched into another in the arts.

"Do I still have nightmares about the other (job)? Yes," says Bill Sanders, a Steamboat Springs, Colo., ceramics artist who is retired from the lumber and wood flooring business he owned for 20 years. He says he still wakes up sometimes in a cold sweat worrying about whether some shipment is making it to a job site on time. Then he realizes he doesn't need to worry about that anymore.

These days, Sanders, 64, keeps to the outdoors — he skis during the winter and volunteers for the U.S. Forest Service during the summer — and creates his artwork, which

Myth of abundance

Despite previous statistics you may have heard about, Canada has only 6.5 per cent of the world's water supply — much less than Brazil and Russia. PAVELS/VEER

We aren't as flush with water as we think we are

ANDRÉ VOSHART
Water Canada

That statistic you may have heard before — that Canada holds 20 per cent of the world's fresh water — may be too good to be true. According to a leading water expert, we are not as flush with water as we think we are.

"The myth of limitless abundance is the notion that Canadians have maintained that we have more water than anyone else in the world, and that we will never run out of it," says Robert Sandford, author of Cold Matters: The State and Fate of

Canada's Freshwater.

Canada has only 6.5 per cent of the world's supply — much less than Brazil and Russia and about the same as the United States.

"This myth allows us not to think about how we use water and what we do to it," Sandford says. "We turn on our taps and we expect it to be there."

He adds that the myth is perpetuated by reliable water supplies in urban areas and very cheap costs for delivery. More than two-thirds of the nation's fresh water is in the north, while 80 per cent of the population is in the south, where its needs are concentrated.

The perception of the Great Lakes as an infinite supply of fresh water is also skewed. Sierra Club Canada reports that, on average, only one per cent of the lakes' water is renewed annually by precipitation and inflow from rivers and groundwater.

"There are times when we don't have enough water to maintain agriculture, meet human water needs, (meet) industrial demands, and still keep the Great Lakes at levels necessary to permit optimal conditions for shipping," Sandford says.

Climate change is also beginning to have an enormous influence on the water supply, melting much of the "post-glacial hydrological wealth" in the Arctic and other northern regions. Additionally, Sandford says climate change is rearing its head in other ways. Since a warmer atmosphere holds more water and water levels are declining due to evaporation (such as in the Great Lakes), this increased vapour then fuels more extreme weather events.

The nation's water is on the move and Sandford explains it may not be there when we need it.

"As we can no longer take water for granted, we would be wise to dispel the myth of its limitless abundance."

Water works

Water is precious and should be conserved. We have partnered with RBC Royal Bank to offer you inspiring reasons to use water wisely.

Why is it important to invest in water?

Everyone needs water, no matter where you live or what you do. It's one of the Earth's most precious natural resources, and nearly everything we do—from the crops we grow to the energy we produce—depends on it.

As our cities and towns continue to grow, the strain we put on water is increasing. Now more than ever, we need to protect clean water, for future generations in Canada and around the world.

That's why, in 2007, we launched the RBC Blue Water Project with a 10-year, $50 million commitment to help ensure a future with clean, fresh water.

Clean, fresh water for all Canadians.

Singing in the rain

Water Canada

In the natural water cycle, water seeps into the ground, evaporates into plants and the air, and makes its way to nearby waterways.

But where does rain go after a storm in the city?

A paved urban landscape changes the natural process. Water flows into storm drains, along the way collecting the garbage, road salt, and bacteria that pollutes our water. Storms can also cause overflows in sewers that weren't built to manage heavy rain. A 2012 national infrastructure report card estimates it would cost $15.8 billion to replace Canada's poor stormwater infrastructure.

When sewers overflow, there's a greater chance of flooded basements in homes and businesses. More frequent and heavier storms have made water damage the leading cause of insurance claims in Canada. The cost to taxpayers is steep, too — every year, billions of dollars are spent repairing the damage.

"We should all care, whether we're property owners or renters," says Christine Zimmer, manager of protection and restoration at Credit Valley Conservation in Ontario.

Zimmer offers these suggestions to make a difference:

1 Disconnect your downspout. "Roof downspouts are often directly connected to storm sewers. Disconnecting them and leading the water to rain barrels or rain gardens can help reduce instances of basement flooding," she says.

2 Make paved areas as small as possible. According to the 2013 RBC Canadian Water Attitudes study, 60 per cent of 18-34-year-olds would give up a paved driveway to help water management.

3 Use less fertilizer or none at all. Run-off collects nutrients from fertilizers, such as nitrogen and phosphorus, which can cause toxic algae blooms in waterways and result in a weakened aquatic ecosystem and more frequent beach closures.

Leaky business

Down the drain. Homeowners can be paying unwanted costs due to faulty faucets, toilets

Water Canada

Are you more likely to repair an Internet connection or a leaky faucet? According to the 2013 RBC Canadian Water Attitudes Study, 75 per cent of Canadians would choose to call tech support before they dial the plumber.

But while you may lose a few hours of surfing without your Wi-Fi, you could be throwing away dollars on wasted water. Studies have found that homes can lose up to 76 cubic metres of water per year due to leaks. That's the volume of 76 small bar fridges.

Want to clear your water-wasting conscience? Here's how to locate and fix minor leaks.

• Check your water bill. If your bill is higher than usual and you think your household water use has remained more or less the same, it might be time to check for leaks. Don't worry — while some leaks require professional attention, not all have to end with an expensive invoice. For a list of reasons to call the plumber, visit bit.ly/TUwpnc.

• Put a stop to dripping faucets. A faucet leaking 60 drops a minute can waste up to 8,703 litres of water in one year, but can cost pennies to fix. Worn out washers may be the cause, and most hardware stores carry faucet repair kits that illustrate how to replace a washer. EPCOR, Edmonton's water utility, has videos on how to replace single- and double-stem faucets. Visit bit.ly/18EFUP2.

• Listen for leaky toilets. According to Environment Canada, a toilet that continues to

A faucet leaking 60 drops a minute can waste up to 8,703 litres of water in one year, but can cost pennies to fix. PAUL FLEET/VEER run after flushing can waste up to 200,000 litres of water in one year. If you suspect a leak, add a few drops of food colouring to the tank. If the colour appears in the bowl, you could have a loose flapper valve. For a video demonstrating how to replace flapper valves at a low cost, see bit.ly/11lbVFL. Note: If the leak is around the base of the toilet, it's time to call a professional.

Keep in mind that leaks aren't always easy to find. If you suspect a leak but can't locate the source, call your utility and ask for a residential water audit.

Greywater use gaining waves of support

ANDRÉ VOSHART
Water Canada

In many homes across Canada, all water is created equal — the water used to wash hair, flush toilets, and rinse dishes all comes from the same source. However, new technologies are helping green-minded citizens and developers curb Canada's wasteful water ways.

One approach looks at recycling "greywater," the waste water from showers, baths, and other sources not contaminated with sewage. Homeowners and builders can install greywater reuse systems, which will reclaim and purify the lightly used water in order to flush toilets. They are already in place in parts of the world where potable (drinkable) water is scarce, like the southwestern United States and Australia.

"To flush a toilet, you don't need the purist, filtered, pH-adjusted, UV-disinfected, and ozonated (or chlorinated) water in the world," says Chris Higgins of the Canada Green Building Council, an organization that certifies Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) homes. He says

New technologies are helping green-minded citizens and developers curb Canada's wasteful water ways, including recycling "greywater," the waste water from showers, baths, and other sources not contaminated with sewage. VALIA VITALY/VEER flushing a toilet accounts for between a third and a quarter of water use in the average home, and "most clear, odour-free water will work."

He says a Canada-wide adoption of reuse systems is low, but growing.

"Areas with high water cost are much more likely to adopt greywater reuse strategies," he says.

For example, Higgins lives in Vancouver, where his single-family home has no water meter, so he pays the same amount no matter how much he uses. But other municipalities present citizens with more of a reason to be water conscious: Edmonton charges both for water use by the litre and sewage by the litre, so in that case, "there are monthly cost savings using greywater," he says.

City planners in Guelph, Ont., have a goal to lower water use by 20 per cent by 2025. Wayne Galliher, the city's water conservation project manager, says new homes were using on average more water than homes 30 years their age and that's the reason the city launched Blue Built Homes, an initiative to encourage local builders to promote water efficiency in new buildings. In a study of the city's greywater systems, 25 participants were monitored, and average water demands dropped by 22.6 litres per capita per day.

WE'RE PROTECTING A DRINKABLE, SWIMMABLE, FISHABLE FUTURE.

Game of thirst

Water scarcity and severe droughts bring big conflicts to cities, but most of us aren't ready for such events, and some don't even want to think about it.

So how do you engage people on such a serious topic? Make it fun, but keep it meaningful.

Last fall, British Columbia's Okanagan Water Basin Board (OBWB) proved it had the right idea. In partnership with Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada (AAFC) and the B.C. Ministry of Environment, OBWB brought together key players in government, as well as regional water suppliers, and reps from the agriculture, fisheries, and ranching communities to participate in a game about municipal thirst.

Facing drought is a growing necessity. In the United States, drought ranks second or third of natural disasters, depending on the year, in terms of economic impact. In Canada, dry periods are becoming more frequent and prolonged.

In the game, teams considered several scenarios with varying degrees of drought, quickly learning that any choice would impact water supply and, depending on how the scenarios are managed, could increase or reduce conflict within the community.

They also learned success comes down to collaboration, says Nelson Jatel of OBWB.

"In these situations, it's critical to communicate clearly and work together. The game allowed us to think through some of the complex partnerships that are key to surviving a drought." KERRY FREEK

Tapping into smart billing

Next evolution. Smart meters are changing the way Canadians are thinking about water use

Water Canada

In the old days, you received a water bill — likely one based on a flat rate — and paid it, no matter how much water you used.

If your city had meters — more than one-third of Canadian households still don't — you might be billed for the actual volume of water you consumed, but it would be too late to understand and adjust your consumption patterns. Not only that, it might take several billing cycles to figure out if your home had a pesky, water-wasting leak.

"For years, it's been 'get water bill, pay bill, get water, consume water,'" says Norm Daigle, executive vice-president of Harris Utilities SmartWorks.

The next evolution — smart metering — is changing the way Canadians think about their consumption.

With smart meters, measurements are more accurate, resulting in bills that better reflect actual use. Savvy utilities are taking things one step further, making those bills transparent and accessible in near real-time, so customers can fully understand how their household activities impact the bottom line.

Harris Utilities is one company that offers dynamic metering and billing services. With their software, utilities can provide customers with online reports that display details about their consumption patterns so they can monitor and adjust use accordingly.

Customers can play with the data, creating scenarios that demonstrate how performing different activities at different times might save money. They can compare current use to years, months, and even days prior. Some utilities even offer a tool to compare use to similar households, and provide tips on how to use water more efficiently and economically.

Utilities are also breaking down water use in more meaningful measurements. "With mobile phone billing, we know what a minute means," Daigle says. "But what's a cubic metre? Is it equivalent to watering my lawn? Feedback like that helps customers better understand their water use."

Ultimately, smart metering is about empowering the consumer. Gone are the days of the flat rate and vague bills.

"Dynamic billing brings the customers into the picture," Daigle says. "At the end of the day, it's customers who are making the decision to turn the taps on or off. They should be participants in achieving conservation objectives — that's the sweet spot."

EVERY DROP OF WATER COUNTS

When a city faces a water problem, it's serious.

In May, a Montreal boil water advisory made headlines when it affected the availability of drinking water for more than 1.3 million people for two days. A few days later, a heavy downpour closed Toronto's Don Valley Parkway during morning rush hour, stalling the major route into the downtown business district. For the past few summers, cities in Canada's West have required emergency conservation bylaws during prolonged drought. The list continues.

With projections for more frequent and severe impacts of climate change and an increasingly urbanized population — some say 80 per cent of the world will live in cities by 2030 — experts are expecting a great deal of stress on water management and supply.

Lynn Patterson, RBC's director of corporate responsibility, says that's one of the reasons why the RBC Blue Water Project recently changed its focus to support initiatives that help protect water in urban centres.

"So many people live and work in cities or urbanized areas, and they depend on water sources that are increasingly under stress," she says. "We must ensure that our water is swimmable, fishable and drinkable now and for generations to come because every drop of water counts."

Patterson says it can often feel like environmental problems are too big for individuals to solve. And sometimes they are.

"But individuals, families, and businesses can have an immediate impact on water. We can pick up litter, plan waterfriendlier landscaping and fix leaking taps and pipes — simple changes in behaviour that actually make a difference right now."

In its first five years, the $50-million RBC Blue Water Project had a broad scope, awarding more than half of its funding commitment to projects that focused on watershed protection. RBC's support for more than 500 organizations around the world includes almost 200 programs for elementary school students, 33 museum and gallery exhibits about water, 36 programs for farmers, and 44 programs to help Aboriginal people.

"We've done a lot of good work so far," Patterson says.

With this new focus, she hopes the RBC Blue Water Project will be able to reach even more people while addressing a significant emerging problem.

INSPIRING OUR YOUTH ACROSS THE COUNTRY

PROJECT WEBFOOT HAS EDUCATED THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS

It's a big year for Ducks Unlimited Canada. Since its inception 75 years ago, the wetland and waterfowl conservation organization has completed more than 9,000 conservation and restoration projects spanning 6.3 million acres of natural habitat across Canada.

In the last four years alone, the organization has restored or protected 120,000 acres of natural wetlands through 434 national projects.

"In addition to these conservation efforts, Ducks Unlimited Canada also works to educate and inspire youth across the country," says Randy Fedorak, development manager for Ducks Unlimited Canada in Calgary.

One such initiative, Project Webfoot, has reached more than half a million Canadian students from grades 4 to 6 since 1997. The interactive education program consists of curriculum-approved online and in-class resources, presentations from guest teachers, and a class trip to a local wetland. There are also opportunities for students to develop community outreach projects, and to be mentored by secondary school students. The program is consistently rated good to excellent in meeting teaching requirements by 98 per cent of teacher participants.

Project Webfoot relies heavily on the support of individual and corporate sponsors. This year, its fate in Alberta was uncertain until Ducks Unlimited Canada received an RBC Blue Water Project leadership grant to assist with the operating costs.

"It's absolutely critical funding," Fedorak says. "We would not have been able to sustain the program as it was;

(the grant) has allowed Project Webfoot to continue to exist in the province."

The RBC Blue Water Project grant will also assist Ducks Unlimited Canada in its research regarding the impact of flooding on water quality in the Smith Creek and Broughton's Creek watersheds in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Both watersheds ultimately flow into Lake Winnipeg. The study will investigate the potential costs and barriers to businesses, landowners, and the community, and will assist policy-makers and members of the public in quantifying and understanding the importance of wetland conservation and protection in Canada.

Together, we're protecting a clean water future.

Friday, June 14, 2013 is the fourth annual RBC Blue Water Day. To celebrate, our employees around the world will be participating in RBC Blue Water Community Makeovers to help improve the quality of water in our growing towns and cities. We'll also be announcing the recipients of our 2013 RBC Blue Water Project grants. These grants are part of our 10-year, $50 million commitment to protect water through the RBC Blue Water Project.

With the help of our dedicated 80,000+ employees and partner organizations globally, we're working to ensure a future with fresh water.

From playoff TKOs to the cusp of a cup

NHL playoffs. After first-round exits a year ago, Bruins and Blackhawks show they've learned from heartbreak Jonathan Toews second-guessed everything after he and the Chicago Blackhawks bowed out of the Stanley Cup playoffs in the first round each of the past two years.

Winning it all in 2010 was little consolation.

"You start asking yourself so many questions of why you're not having the same success,"

Loneliest of Original Six

The cup final between the Bruins and Blackhawks is the first Original Six championship series since 1979. Original Six teams have won the cup nine times since then. Detroit claimed four titles, Montreal grabbed two, and the Rangers, Chicago and Boston won one each. Toronto is the only original club to be shut out in that span. The Maple Leafs haven't won the cup since 1967.

Selective memory

I'm drawing on the experiences from 2010. I know that I've been here before, my teammates have been here before."

Chicago forward Patrick Sharp on the Blackhawks' last championship season.

Toews said. "It's easy to ask yourself a lot of questions and spin your wheels a little bit."

Shawn Thornton couldn't bring himself to watch a single playoff game a year ago after he and the Boston Bruins were eliminated by the Washington Capitals in the first round.

"It's too painful," he said. "I remember the feeling of getting knocked out."

Painful as those playoff exits were, the Blackhawks and Bruins are back in the Stanley Cup final in large part because of those stumbles. These are veteran teams armed with a wealth of experience that they used to come back from the brink of elimination to move within four victories of another title.

"I think you realize that anything can kind of happen," Bruins centre Chris Kelly said. "I think this group has experienced a lot in such a short time. I think just playing how many Game 7s we've played and we've been fortunate enough to sweep a few teams and just knowing that it doesn't matter what happened in the game before, it's the next game regardless of if it's a win or a loss."

The Bruins have 17 players back from the 2011 cup team while eight remain from the Blackhawks' championship run three years ago.

Experience, like leadership, is an intangible asset that's difficult to quantify.

"I think mentally just knowing you've been in this situation before and maybe there's a sense of calmness," Chicago's Duncan Keith said. "I'm going to try to use every bit of experience I can, whether that's knowing the pressure that comes with being in a final or just how hard it is to win."

NBA Finals. Green and Neal lead shower of 3-point baskets to give San Antonio 2-1 lead

Danny Green scored 27 points, Gary Neal added 24 and the San Antonio Spurs set an NBA Finals record with 16 3-pointers in a 113-77 victory over the Miami Heat on Tuesday night that gave them a 2-1 series lead.

Green hit seven of nine 3s, Neal was six for 10 from deep and Tim Duncan chipped in 12 points and 14 rebounds for the Spurs, who responded to a 19-point drubbing in Game 2 with a blowout of their own.

The Spurs flummoxed four-time MVP LeBron James for a third straight game, holding him to 15 points on 7-for-21 shooting. James also had 11 rebounds and five assists, but he missed 11 of his first 14 shots and never looked comfortable against San Antonio's swarming defence.

CHL. Branch announces end of Euro goalie draftees

Foreign goaltenders are on the way out in the Canadian Hockey League.

The national governing body for major junior hockey announced on Tuesday that the CHL's 2013 import draft will be the final opportunity for member clubs to select European goaltenders.

"The goaltender position is the most important in our game," said CHL president David Branch in a statement. "In partnership with Hockey Canada, the CHL has identified the need to further develop Canadian goaltenders by providing increased opportunities for them to compete in our league and succeed at the next level."

"The CHL will continue to be the world's largest development league and the number 1 supplier of talent to the National Hockey League and Canadian Inter-university Sport."

European goaltenders born in 1994 or 1995 may be selected by CHL clubs in the first round of the 2013 CHL import draft.

All current European goaltenders and any selected in this year's draft may continue to play in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, the Ontario Hockey League and the Western Hockey League until they have exhausted their major junior eligibility.

The decision was made by the CHL board of directors at their meeting in May.

The draft is on July 3 with the Vancouver Giants currently holding the first overall pick. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Review. Old brand back from the dead with a new look, and it's steeped in technology

wheelbasemedia.com

Are you shocked and slack-jawed about the 2014 Jeep Cherokee that will arrive later this year?

Who can really blame you? After all, it was the immensely popular — and very square — XJ-designated Cherokee that introduced truckloads of buyers to the virtues of four-wheel-drive as far back as 1984. For the next two decades, it remained steadfastly unchanged until the Liberty stepped in for the 2002 model year.

With the Liberty's retirement, however, Chrysler-Fiat's off-road division has resurrected the Cherokee brand, but with a significant — and controversial — shift in direction. For starters, instead of the brick-like original, the latest model has some seriously modern sculpting going on.

All by itself, the pinched and pointy-nose grille says plenty about the risk that Jeep's designers have undertaken in creating the new Cherokee. Then there are the eyelid headlights that would have been impossible to imagine on any production car, Jeep or otherwise ... until now, that is.

The interior is also as modern as the outside. In the last few years Jeep has switched from utilitarian hard plastic dashboards to creating inviting soft-touch shapes. The split-folding and fore/aft-sliding second-row seat is standard, while an available fold-flat front passenger seat has storage beneath the flip-up bottom cushion.

Front-wheel-drive is the Cherokee norm, but buyers will be able to choose from three different four-wheel-drive setups, depending on trim level. Active Drive I, optional in the Sport, Latitude and Limited editions, is a single-speed unit that kicks in automatically whenever tire slip is detected.

Active Drive II, also available in the same models, comes with a two-speed transfer case and is designed for off-road use with either the four or six-cylinder engines. However, for rock crawling and boulder hopping, Active Drive Lock, as the name implies, locks up the rear differential in low range. All 4x4 systems include Selec-Terrain traction control

Design

It's as if the designers snuck a futuristic concept model out the back door and ordered up full production before any of the higher-ups got wise to the plan. The rest of the sheetmetal appears tame by comparison, but encasing the body in protective lower cladding gives the Cherokee a handsomely rugged silhouette.

with five different settings to match the kind of ground you're on (snow, mud etc).

Pricing for the base Cherokee Sport will likely start in the upper-$20,000 range, which sits between the smaller $18,500 (base price) Compass and the larger $40,000

Grand Cherokee, effectively providing a brand-new product in a crucial size and price niche.

But what about the controversy? Forget about it. The Cherokee has veered off its traditional path to seek out new worlds and supporters.

Auto Know: The patented Corsa design is eliminating the drone and promoting an all-round quieter driving experience

wheelbasemedia.ca

Ask anyone. Spending money on a new exhaust system is mostly about the sound. If you pick up a bit of extra power, that's just a bonus.

But it's also risky business for buyers with hundreds of dollars or maybe even $1,000-$1,500 on the line.

It took 2007 Mustang GT owner Gilles Belliveau many months to make up his mind and all the usual questions came into play. The most important, even ahead of price: will it have the right sound?

It's a very personal "style" sort of thing, and to make matters worse, buyers can't really hear, exactly, how a new system will sound until after it has been bought, shipped and put on the car. But by then there is no turning back if you made the wrong choice: you're stuck with it.

"You can listen to cars on YouTube.com with the same system you want, or hear sound clips at the websites of some companies but you just don't really know for sure how it will sound until it's on your car," says Belliveau, an investment manager who routinely takes his Mustang on weekend road trips.

Belliveau twists the key of the blue convertible and the 4.6-litre-V8 rips a tinny cackle and pops a few times before settling into a pleasant "blub, blub, blub."

"I love it. It's perfect."

Perfect sound in this case has an interesting twist. In fact, it's the lack of sound that's so impressive with this Corsa-brand system.

Cruising down the freeway in the passenger seat, you soon realize that the exhaust is not making any sound ... at all. Even less than the factory exhaust.

"It's quiet when it needs to be."

No kidding.

Crack the throttle and it comes to life. Settle back into cruise mode and there's

Quoted

"I love it, it's perfect. It's quiet when it needs to be and no drone at all."

2007 Mustang GT owner Gilles Belliveau reacted positively to the installation of a new Corsa exhaust on his vehicle just the rush of wind.

"See, there's no drone at all." Ah, yes, the dreaded five-letter "D" word.

It might seem like a small deal but a droning exhaust can become incredibly annoying as it drowns out conversation and the stereo, both of which require elevated volume levels to be heard. And pardon the pun but a droning exhaust system is just plain exhausting.

It's bad enough that you run the risk of drone — or, major drone — when you buy an expensive upgraded exhaust system, but sometimes even the factory that built your car doesn't always get it right. Owners of the V6 Camaro might know this feeling. Wheelbase Media's recent testing found the car enjoyable but that it also exhibited a tiring low-frequency exhaust drone at highway speeds.

By contrast, Craig Kohrs' kids can sleep in the back of his full-size sport-utility vehicle and not be woken up by the Corsa exhaust system.

"In fact, I'm doing 20 mph and talking to you on my Bluetooth phone."

And he's clear as a bell for this interview with no exhaust system killing the call.

Kohrs just happens to be vice president and general manager of TMG Performance Products, which manages the Corsa brand.

So, how does the company do it? Where many mufflers use a series of internal bends, baffles and packing, such as fibreglass, to muffle the exhaust noise, a Corsa system is a totally different animal.

Look in one end of the muffler and you can see straight out the other, which makes you wonder how it could be so quiet. And then you pick it up. Watch your back. The heft of a Corsa muffler is due to a myriad of small chambers that completely cancel out sound at certain frequencies. Thus, no highway

With half the job done on the Mustang GT (above) the Corsa muffler on the right is more compact and looks more finished than the stock unit. ALL IMAGES WHEELBASE drone. It's patented technology that the company has been perfecting since 1998.

Where other companies offer systems that fit certain cars, they'll often use the same basic muffler from car to car.

With Corsa, there are no generic systems as each vehicle has its own unique set of frequencies. There's even a system specifically tuned for that V6 Camaro and one for the latest 662-horsepower Mustang Shelby GT500.

Wow, that was fast.

"If we put all our resources on a project, development time is as fast as 30 days," says Kohrs.

Like most companies that think fast and sweat the small details, a tight development loop and a good product depends on the people.

"(Corsa staff are) energetic, passionate ... most of the people here love what we do ... they're into the whole driving experience."

The systems are made of high-grade stainless steel to last the life of the vehicle and most bolt in with simple hand tools.

Kohrs says that a typical Corsa system for the Chevrolet Corvette — which is a large market — can be installed in just seven minutes. None of this all-day-long business.

It took a little longer for us with Belliveau's Mustang but 30 minutes is still respectable for this axle-back exhaust-system change.

As for power, some basic stopwatch testing averaged 15 sprints in third gear from 3,000-5,500 rpm, before and after the exhaust change. The improvement was about three tenths of a second (8.6 seconds with Corsa versus 8.9 with the stock exhaust).

Regardless of the watch, "It definitely feels stronger," says Belliveau, "and the engine used to rattle and ping a bit ... that's gone."

According to Kohrs, Belliveau is just getting going as the Corsa system really begins to show its worth when intake breathing is improved, either with a cold-air intake or even with a supercharger or turbocharger.

Belliveau has plans for more upgrades but he's still wowed by a system that seems to have defied conventional exhaust wisdom.

There's just one problem. Thanks to Corsa, there are fewer stares from the opposite sex. Well, sort of. "I can't really tell, actually ... I drive by them too fast now."

Corsa have also made a muffler exhaust for the once-droning Camaro

The patented and very successful Corsa exhaust muffler design.

Summer weather puts the heat on your vehicle

Driving Force. When temperatures soar your tires and engine can fail as a result

JIL MCINTOSH
Drive@metronews.ca

As the weather gets hotter, your car comes under a lot of stress. You can't change the weather, but you can take steps to ensure your vehicle won't leave you stranded.

"Heat brings out failure, because it puts stress on the components," says Ben Spatafora, national director for CarCostCanada.

It's important to check your tires regularly. Along with the air pressure and tread depth, you should also examine the sidewall for any bulges, bubbles, cracks, or cuts. "A slight bulge may be fine in normal driving, but get on the highway when it's hot, and that bulge can explode," Spatafora says.

If you still have your winter tires on, it's time to change them, since they wear much faster in hot weather.

Open the hood and check the belts and hoses. There should be no cracks in the belts, and the hoses should feel similar to a garden hose when you squeeze them (do this only when the engine has cooled completely). If they're too hard or too soft, it's time to replace them. If they crack or break while driving, they'll leave you stranded.

It's a good idea to switch to summer windshield washer fluid, which doesn't evaporate as quickly on hot glass. "If the outside temperature is 30C, the windshield could be 50C," Spatafora says. That heat bakes on any road grime, bugs or bird droppings, so summer fluid contains detergents for better cleaning.

Modern engine oils are formulated for high heat, but they do break down and provide less protection

Slow, crawling traffic in warm weather can be the most punishing. PROVIDED

Not all cars have them but if yours has a temperature gauge keep an eye on it to avoid any engine damage and possibly a break down. PROVIDED

Helpful hints

- Shade is good. Use automotive sun shades on side windows to protect rear-seat occupants from sunburn. Don't put a blanket in the window, which obscures your vision.

- Big no-no. Never leave children or pets in a parked car. Even with the window cracked open, the interior can get hot enough to cause brain damage or death, and in only a few minutes if it's really hot outside.

your vehicle has a temperature gauge (not all do), it's normal for the needle to rise slightly in slow-moving traffic, or if you're towing a trailer.

But if it rises quickly, or if a red warning light comes on, pull over as soon as you can and shut the car off to avoid the potential for engine damage.

Toyota takes chance and alters safe Corolla formula

Makeover. The model previously lauded for reliability is now getting a modern-day facelift with all the trimmings

MIKE GOETZ
Drive@metronews.ca

Since 1966, when it was first introduced, the Toyota Corolla formula has been reliability, affordability, fuel efficiency, and durability — and hold the hot sauce.

Let other makes and models do the spicy thing, we're here for you guys that need to get to work in the morning. It's been a winning formula. Corolla is the top selling nameplate of all time. By 2012 more than 39 million units were sold worldwide, over 1.3 million of them right here in Canada. Well they've just changed the formula.

The new Corolla formula, incarnated as the all-new 2014 model coming to North American showrooms this summer, was officially revealed last week in consecutive events in Santa Monica, California, and Ottawa, Ont.

In a nutshell, the Corolla is bigger and edgier, and Toyota promises it will be more fun to drive. Certainly a motivation for Toyota's move is watching other makers cut into Corolla's segment dominance, by offering a bit more style and driving zing at no expense to fuel economy and/or affordability.

The 2014 Toyota Corolla S on display at Ottawa's Canadian Science and Technology Museum was only for looking at and sitting in. Driving impressions will have to wait. In the meantime, here are five ways in which Toyota feels it has created a more emotionally-engaging Corolla, and one designed to appeal to a broader section of compact car buyers, especially younger ones...

- 100 mm increase in wheelbase, makes Corolla longer than everything in segment, except Dodge Dart. Extra length used mostly to bolster rear seat room and comfort.

- Bolder styling with more body sculpting and more aggressive face, with segment's only completely LED headlamp system.

- Fuel economy and driving fun possible at the same time, due to new efficient constant velocity transmission (CVT) with seven "simulated" gears.

- More distinct trim lines. CE base with 6-speed manual or traditional 4-speed automatic. LE can fly with new optional CVT. S with 6-speed or CVT, with additional sporty body bits, paddle shifters and sport mode. All-new ECO model

Canada and the Corolla

- Corolla plant in Cambridge, Ont., opened in 1988.
- Every Corolla sold in Canada built in Canada.
- Satellite plant in Brantford last auto plant built in Canada in last 20 years.
- Toyota Motoring Manufacturing Canada now second largest Toyota producer worldwide, building more than 500,000 units annually.

with more fuel economy tricks and bits, including ultimate engine valve-train adjustability (VALVEMATIC in Toyota speak); the extra tech simultaneously makes it Corolla's most powerful and most fuel-efficient model (over 40 m.p.g. is expected).

- Classier interior full of high-tech treats, such as back-up camera, Bluetooth, eight air bags, and new audio system with steering mounted controls.

The new edgier 2014 Toyota Corolla is not yet on sale. PROVIDED

It's amazing how many people fail to properly secure their pets when hitting the road. To extend some common-sense travel protection to your best friend, consider a Kurgo Tru Fit Smart Harness. This product is manufactured using the same webbed material used to make seatbelts. As well, the adjustable padded chest plate adds an extra measure of doggie safety and comfort. The harness can also be used when taking your pet outside for a walk. And with the optional zip line, your dog can still safely roam around the back seat. The Smart Harness retails for $23 US, while the zip line is a $20 option, or you can purchase both together for $38. You can check out the complete line of canine restraint systems at kurgostore.com.

Models are OK for some, but for others, a classic racing car sculpture, especially one created by Mark Maholm will be a much better choice. His hand-made 1:6-scale labours of love are built with solid resin composites and finished in several coats of acrylic lacquer. Most of Maholm's pieces are more than 60 centimetres in length and weigh about 11 kilograms. His website displays a number of Ferraris, but Maholm has also done some profile pieces as well as a series of 1967 Formula One racecars that include the Dan Gurney Eagle, Lotus 49 and Ferrari 312. Prices vary depending on the complexity of the piece, but start at about $6,500 US for the 1:6-scale cars and $800 for the 1:10-scale side profiles. Visit markmaholm.com.

A rolling table

As you're no doubt aware, there's an abundance of gadgets you can attach to your vehicle's trailer hitch other than an actual trailer. One of the latest is the Tailgate Partymate Beer Pong Camping Table. Although the name implies some sort of ritualistic beverage-consuming contest, the real uses for this item include a dining/condiment table, or as a support for portable barbecue. The unit with its 45x90-centimetre twin-table, swing-out design will fit any standard two-inch receiver and weighs in at a chunky 23 kilograms. And when not in use it folds and locks unobtrusively against the back of your car, truck, tall wagon or minivan. The Partymate table sells for $300 US at tailgatepartymate.com.

Be the best backseat driver you can be

Autopilot. Give that annoying habit a positive spin by adjusting how you handle the driver

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

The worst back seat drivers are rarely in the back seat. The worst back seat drivers are usually in the front passenger seat, where you can more closely observe and hear how they are supremely irritating you, and get you fantasizing about an in-car cattle prod.

But "back seat driver" has become the accepted term for a passenger of any location, who is offering too much driving advice.

Insurance.com recently commissioned a survey on back seat driving, and the responses are, well, entirely predictable.

Who are the worst back seat drivers? Husbands and wives.

The two most annoying things they do? Commenting on driving speeds. Giving unwanted directions.

But insurance.com offered some useful advice on how "back seat drivers" can voice legitimate concerns without having it sound like a declaration of war. Basically it's not what you say, but how you say it.

For example, if you're the passenger and really disliking the Miles Davis playing on the stereo, don't say something like, "Jazz is a load of pretentious elephant dung, appealing only to pompous pseudo-intellectuals who only pretend to like it," and then violently change the station until you find something by Avril Lavigne or Justin Bieber.

Better, says insurance.com, that you ask the person if they would mind if you change the station. Or better yet, discuss which kinds of music or artists you both like.

I think, and I hope, that navigation systems have lessened the friction between driver and their passengers, when it comes to finding your destination and the best way to get there.

But I hope it doesn't totally eliminate that rich communication experience that arises when driver and passenger vigorously debate over which route is the better one to take when time is extremely tight.

Oh, how we would miss the tension, the creative adjectives, and the eating of words when your choice ultimately proves disastrous.

Buying or selling, online danger is real

Expert opinion. Lead auto theft detective offers his invaluable tips to avoid being ripped off, roughed up or even murdered during a vehicle sale

BURLAGE
Wheelbasemedia.com

Lt. Ray Collins is a busy guy. A very busy guy.

As a lead detective with the auto-theft task force of the Michigan State Police Department, Collins spends most of his workday trying to stay ahead of criminals by thinking like one. And that's a job that never gets any easier.

About 70,000 vehicles are reported stolen in the Detroit metro area every year. And with modern technology becoming a thief's best friend, prospective robbers are becoming more brazen and acutely resourceful in their schemes and efforts.

Sellers should take pictures in generic settings and it's best to arrange test drives away from their homes. The police station makes a good meeting spot.

"Everything in auto theft seems to go in cycles," said

Collins, seemingly amazed at the complexity of the tricks of the trade.

"They move from scam, to scam, to scam. As soon as we sort of get a grasp on one scam, they have moved to another."

Collins said that computers and the Internet are the tools of choice for prospective car thieves.

Whether it's posting a misleading online classified ad, or producing a counterfeit car title to legitimize the sale of a stolen vehicle, criminals use technology to trick buyers and stay ahead of law enforcement.

In fact, according to the U.S. Internet Crime Complaint Center, consumer reports of shady vehicle sales increased 25 per cent last year and are expected to jump significantly again in 2013.

"This is a new generation of car thief, and both private sellers and buyers have to be very careful," Collins said. "These scammers are very good at what they do, and they don't care who gets hurt when they're trying to pull a rip-off."

And while Collins said most thieves try to avoid violence when it comes to pulling a vehicle scam or theft, there are exceptions. Violent carjackings — and even murder — are being reported after thieves set up a test drive for a private sale, take the owner along for the ride, then steal the vehicle by forcing them out the door, or worse.

"If you're going to sell your car, you never meet anybody at your house. That's just too big a risk nowadays. You might be getting set up for more than car theft," Collins said. "Always meet somebody that wants to take a car for a test drive, at the police station. That's a sure-fire way to protect yourself."

Collins also offered some other important guidelines when selling a vehicle, here they are:

- If possible, bring a friend or family member along for the test drive, and make sure someone knows how long you expect to be gone. Carry your cell phone and keep it handy and visible throughout the trip.
- Be wary of anyone who makes an offer to buy a vehicle sight-unseen. This is often a warning sign of a larger scam that involves transferring the title through a bad cheque or another fraudulent payment method.
- Negotiate only with the specific person who is purchasing your car, and never with someone acting on the buyer's behalf. And if willing to accept a cheque, complete the transaction at the buyer's bank to ensure payment verification. And while it's important for sellers to protect themselves, Collins warns that most of the complaints he investigates come from the buyers. A wildly popular scam flooding into Collins' office involves a stolen vehicle, a counterfeit title, and what appear to be a trustworthy seller and a safe meeting place. Scammers will post a vehicle for sale on a web site and invite prospective buyers to an apartment complex for a meeting and a test drive. Typically there's a sob story about financial hardship as the reason why a quick sale and a cash payment are necessary, and why the selling price is well below book or market value. The title — usually created with some nifty computer work — matches the vehicle-identification number and the apartment address where the meeting was set up, a transaction is made, and the two parties go their separate ways. "Everything seems normal, the guy gives you a title for it, you give him cash for the car, you go to get the car titled, and it's stolen," Collins said. "You go back to the apartment complex and nobody has ever heard of this guy. What you weren't paying any attention to is that they never walked out of the apartment. He walked out in between buildings or he came down the stairway."
- Title washing is another popular sales scam that involves removing the word "salvaged" from the history of vehicles that have been wrecked and repaired. Spending a few bucks on a vehicle history report from CarFax or AutoCheck is often a telling and wise investment.
- While the focus is on your personal safety, don't forget the basics of the transaction. If you're buying, thoroughly test the vehicle in broad daylight, also making sure to test the lights. "There are no guarantees when buying or selling a vehicle," Collins said. "But try not to negotiate alone, use the Internet as a tool, and if something doesn't feel right, there are plenty of other cars for sale out there to choose from."
